Richardson Candles

Cambridge is the last city in the UK to retain its own custom-designed lighting stock from the post-war period. Furthermore these street lights were designed by one of the eminent architects of the time. The Richardson Candles (as they are known) have stood in the centre of the city of Cambridge for over fifty years. But people thought there time was limited and lots of media speculation stated these will be removed..not so, JW UK,completely refurbished and retrofitted with Cosmo and LED, bringing up to today's lighting standard and becoming a safe fitting once again.

Parkers Piece

Refurbishment of the Reality Checkpoint column situated in Parkers Piece, this column had some damage and paint issues, and the lanterns needed bringing up to standard, we completely stripped the column and with various processes and coats completely refurbished this column bringing back to life. this also included refurbishing and re-glazing the lanterns, and fitting with 90W CPO. Great Job, and great to work alongside Balfour Beatty on this prestigious project.
